Detection is in your hands

Testicular cancer is the most common cancer affecting young New Zealand men under 40.

More than 170 are diagnosed every year, but the good news is that it is very treatable when caught early.

Testicular cancer may not cause symptoms in the early stages but can include a painless lump, swelling or change or in size or shape of a testicle.

Guys, get into a regular habit of checking the fellas and if you're suspicious of anything out of the ordinary going on down there get it checked out.

Do not wait for it to go away!
